Re: Menace of Roaming Animals

Management had earlier appealed to members of the University community to keep their domestic animals in check in a Special Release 2271 dated 30 January, 2009.

Management has however noted with dismay again that these animals are still roaming the campus and causing a lot of havoc which includes the pollution of the environment.

Management has received myriads of complaints from Departments and Units and finds the pollution of the environment very disturbing and most times embarrassing.

Management has therefore mandated the Security Unit and any aggrieved person to impound these animals and hand them over to the Zoological Garden.

Thank you.
